

The definition offered by Powell demonstrates a lack of understanding of the nature of Internet Service Providers (ISP). Content is not their domain, nor should it be. I am gravely concerned that this will open the door to a monopolistic stranglehold on both access to information and the information itself. By permitting the uninformed to paint policy with broad strokes, you leave all of us vulnerable to exploitation. By doing a little research today, you can save us all the expense of legal action tomorrow.
